Cubans In Puerto Rico Alarmed By Threats

SAN JUAN, P.R. (AP) -- Members of the prosperous Cuban colony in Puerto Rico are alarmed by warnings to clear out of Puerto Rico by November 30, or face terrorist attacks.

The warnings, which reach the Cubans by mail and by communiques published by the so-called "Anti-Cuban Commandos" also warn against voting in the island's upcoming November 7 general elections.

An estimated one-third of the 35,000 strong Cuban colony here group.

According to Commander Hector Lugo, head of the Detective Squad in the island's capital city, the attacks against Cuban property "are isolated cases, not part of a organized plan."

Another police officer, also assigned to investigative work, confirmed that "careful probes" have been made into the attack on Cuban property and that no evidence has come to light of any organized anti-Cuban group.
